Silvally's Different Forms

If you evolve Silvally from Type: Null, you will be able to help it change into any of 18 different forms, each of which changes its type. Change Silvally's forms by giving it a memory disc to hold. There are 17 memory discs, one for each type other than Normal, and you can receive them all from Wicke when you meet outside Poni Grove after becoming Champion. If Silvally is not holding any of these 17 memory discs, then it will return to its default form, Type: Normal.

Minior's Core Forms

When you first break through the rocky shell of Minior's Meteor Form, you might think that you've discovered the truth of what lies beneath it. But encounter a few more Minior, and you'll come to understand that its cores come in a variety of different colors. There are seven different cores in total—one for each color of the rainbow!

Minior will reveal its core when its HP drops below half in battle. Although Minior's stats differ when it changes from its Meteor Form to any of these forms, the different colors do not differ from one another in any way, so it's up to you if you try to collect them all for your Pokédex.

Moves

The following pages give details on the many moves that Pokémon can learn. First, the list of moves describes the effects of each move. On page 504, a table lists type-specific or Pokémon-specific Z-Moves. Moves that can be learned in special ways, such as from Move Tutors and BP shops, are listed starting on page 505. And page 506 provides a list of where you can get every TM in Alola, so you can teach their moves to your Pokémon as well.

PP	How many times the move can be used
Range	The number and types of targets the move affects

Pokémon Natures

When you check the Summary screen of a Pokémon, you'll see that it has a Nature. Every individual Pokémon has a Nature, and its Nature can influence how its stats grow as it levels up. Most Natures will cause one stat to grow more quickly than normal, while causing another one to grow more slowly than normal. A few Natures don't have either effect, so they provide neither benefit nor drawback. When raising Pokémon, choosing the right Nature for the role you want it to play is essential.

Natures also affect what flavors a Pokémon likes and dislikes. Malasadas and certain Berries have various flavors, and each Pokémon has its favorite. Give a Pokémon a malasada in a flavor it likes, and it will become even more affectionate toward you. On the other hand, if a Pokémon uses certain Berries with flavors it doesn't like during battle, it can become confused!

The table on this page shows what Natures affect which stats, as well as what flavors Pokémon of each Nature like and dislike, so refer to this table when raising Pokémon or feeding them malasadas.

Pokémon Characteristics

In addition to having a Nature, each individual Pokémon also has a Characteristic. A Pokémon's Characteristic is a way to get some insight into which of the Pokémon's stats is likely to have the highest individual strength. Keep in mind that Characteristics only show what is highest among that Pokémon's individual strengths, and it has nothing to do with whether or not a strength is maximized. A Pokémon with relatively low individual strengths will still have a Characteristic based on which stat is highest among its own six stats.

Stat that grows easily	Characteristic
HP	Loves to eat	Nods off a lot	Likes to relax
	Takes plenty of siestas	Scatters things often
ATTACK	Proud of its power	A little quick tempered	Quick tempered
	Likes to thrash about	Likes to fight
DEFENSE	Sturdy body	Highly persistent	Good perseverance
	Capable of taking hits	Good endurance
SP. ATK	Highly curious	Thoroughly cunning	Very finicky
	Mischievous	Often lost in thought
SP. DEF	Strong willed	Strongly defiant	Somewhat stubborn
	Somewhat vain	Hates to lose
SPEED	Likes to run	Impetuous and silly	Quick to flee
	Alert to sounds	Somewhat of a clown

Base Points Received from Wild Pokémon

Each Pokémon you battle in the wild will yield some base points that increase your Pokémon's base stats. The table below tells you which stat is increased by the various Pokémon you can encounter in the wild in Alola.

Items

The following lists provide details about the items you can collect and use during your Alolan adventure, including items you can use in battle, items you can give your Pokémon to hold, and Berries they can consume. When two prices are listed, the first one is the discounted price customers end up paying at the Thrifty Megamart on Royal Avenue after the coupon is applied. The second price is the one charged at other locations and at the Thrifty Megamart before the discount. Mega Stones, which help your Pokémon undergo Mega Evolution during battle, are covered on page 525. Z-Crystals, which you can collect to power up your Pokémon's moves into Z-Moves, can be found in the list on page 524. And all TMs (special reusable items that can be used outside of battle to teach Pokémon moves) can be found back in the list on page 506.

Pokémon Moves Reverse Lookup

The tables on the following pages allow you to look up which Pokémon can learn each of the moves available in the Alola region. Pokémon are listed in alphabetical order and prefaced by their National Pokédex number, so you can easily find their Pokédex entries to learn more about them. If you hope to pass down unusual Egg Moves and become an expert in finding Pokémon Eggs, these tables will be essential!

In the brackets following each Pokémon's name, you can quickly see how the Pokémon can learn a specific move. If you find a number, that means the Pokémon can learn the move when it reaches that level. Otherwise, refer to the key below:

TM = Move can be learned from a Technical Machine	BP = Move can be learned from a BP Move Tutor (p. 505)
T = Move can be taught by a Move Tutor (p. 505)	E = Move can be passed on as an Egg Move
EV = Move can be learned upon evolving	ZC = Move can be learned from the Zygarde Cube

Note that different forms of a species may be listed seperately, as sometimes different forms can learn different moves. For Pokémon that can be found as regional variants in Alola, you will find that their forms as found in other regions are marked with ◆. To obtain these forms, you will generally need to have brought them from another game.

Pokémon Abilities Reverse Lookup

These tables tell you which Pokémon can have a particular Ability, and they cover all of the Pokémon featured in this National Pokédex. Remember that Pokémon species can generally have two normal Abilities, and can also possibly have a rare Hidden Ability, so you may see the same Pokémon listed multiple times in these lists. Pokémon are listed with their National Pokédex number, so that you can easily flip back to their entry in the National Pokédex to see more details, such as whether the Ability you are looking for is a normal Ability or a Hidden Ability.

Regional variants, other special forms, and their regular counterparts

Some Pokémon appear as regional variants in Alola. This means they appear in a form that is unique to Alola and different from how they have appeared in previous Pokémon titles. These regional variants may have different Abilities than their more common counterparts. If only one form of a Pokémon species can have a particular Ability, you will find that form information after its name in these listings—whether it is the Alola Form or any other alternate form that a Pokémon species can have. If a ◆ is after a Pokémon's name, it means the form found in other regions can have the Ability it is listed under, but the Alola Form found in the wild in Pokémon Ultra Sun and Pokémon Ultra Moon will not. If nothing appears after a Pokémon's name, then any known form of that Pokémon can have that Ability.

Pokémon Weakness Chart

This weakness chart provides you with a handy reference to check which move types a particular Pokémon is weak to when you are battling against it. It also tells you which move types the Pokémon may be immune to. Note that a Pokémon's Ability may affect how much damage it takes from certain move types. Look out for types highlighted in green or yellow—these will be affected by which Ability your opponent has!

Key to Tables
4×	Pokémon has 4× weakness to this type. Any other weak types deal 2× damage.
*	Ability increases resistance to certain move types, though it does not make the Pokémon entirely immune to them. If a weakness is affected, it will be marked as well.
🟩	Ability grants immunity to a type (also marked in green). Pokémon without that Ability will not share this immunity.
🟨	Ability may cause the Pokémon to take additional damage from a type (also marked in yellow) it is not usually weak to.
🟩🟨	Ability can cause a new immunity but may also cause a Pokémon to take additional damage from a type it is not usually weak to.

Note: If a Pokémon can have two or more Abilities that will cause different weaknesses or immunities, you will see small numbers linking each Ability to the type or types it affects.

Type Matchup Chart

It's vital to keep track of types during battles. All Pokémon have types, and all moves have types as well. Knowing the type matchups will let you build a balanced party, counter your opponent's strategies, and in general help you be more successful in battle. Each type has its own strengths and weaknesses—for example, a Fairy-type Pokémon will take only 50% damage from Fighting-type moves, but it will receive double damage if it's hit with a Steel-type move. These strengths and weaknesses are all shown in the essential chart below.

How do types work if your Pokémon has two types? For Pokémon with two types, the strengths and weaknesses of both types are counted. If a Pokémon has two types that share a weakness, moves it's doubly weak to cause four times the damage instead of the usual double damage. If the two types share a strength, then a move it's doubly strong against deals 25% of its base damage instead of 50%.

For example, an Alolan Geodude will take four times the damage from any Ground-type move. This is because it's an Electric- and Rock-type Pokémon, both of which are weak against Ground-type moves. On the other hand, if the Alolan Geodude is hit with a Flying-type move, it will only receive 25% of the damage of that move, because Electric- and Rock-type Pokémon are both strong against Flying-type moves.

So what happens if you hit the Alolan Geodude with a Steel-type move? Steel-type moves aren't very effective against Electric-type Pokémon, but they're super effective against Rock types. In that kind of situation, the weaknesses and resistances of the types cancel each other out—in other words, Alolan Geodude would take a normal amount of damage from a Steel-type move.

Type	Effect
FIRE	• Immune to the Burned condition
GRASS	• Immune to Leech Seed • Immune to powder and spore moves
ELECTRIC	• Immune to the Paralysis condition
ICE	• Immune to the Frozen condition • Take no damage from hail • Immune to Sheer Cold
POISON	• Immune to the Poisoned and Badly Poisoned conditions, even when switched in with Toxic Spikes in play* • Nullify Toxic Spikes so no other Pokémon will be Poisoned when switching in. (If the Poison-type Pokémon is also a Flying type, has the Levitate Ability, or holds an Air Balloon, this nullifying effect will not occur.)
GROUND	• Immune to being paralyzed from Electric-type moves (but can still be paralyzed by moves of other types) • Take no damage from sandstorms
FLYING	• Cannot be damaged or otherwise affected by Spikes, Sticky Web, or Toxic Spikes when switching in* • Not affected by any terrain moves
ROCK	• Take no damage from sandstorms • Sp. Def goes up in a sandstorm
GHOST	• Cannot be affected by moves and Abilities that prevent Pokémon from fleeing from battle
DARK	• Immune to the effect of status moves used by Pokémon with the Prankster Ability
STEEL	• Take no damage from sandstorms • Immune to the Poisoned and Badly Poisoned conditions, even when switched in with Toxic Spikes in play*

*Some immunities can be negated by other moves, Abilities, or items. The Corrosion Ability, for example, allows even Poison- or Steel-type Pokémon to be Poisoned. Likewise, Flying Pokémon can be grounded, such as by moves like Smack Down, taking away their immunity to Ground-type moves.
